DAY 4: Enjoy Chilean rodeo, pisco, empanadas,

and cueca in Santa Cruz

Today, we'll head two hours out of Santiago into Santa Cruz, the hub of Chile's wine-growing region. Before we venture into local viticulture, we'll stop by a local rodeo along the way. Rodeo is the country's national sport. Here, several skilled huasos (cowboys) will teach you about rodeo's origins, traditions, and garments.

Afterward, you'll savor asado, Chilean BBQ, for lunch. This will show you an entirely new side of rodeo!

Once in Santa Cruz, settle into your balcony room at our intimate, colonial-style hotel. Later, we'll discover pisco, a grape brandy produced in winemaking regions, when we learn how to concoct a traditional pisco sour and how to make a revered cultural icon: the empanada. These pastries — stuffed with everything from minced meat to cheese to seafood — are Chile's national dish, typically savored on the street on the go, or with a glass of red wine at dinner. After your culinary lessons in the afternoon, you'll enjoy a private folkloric show, demonstrating the lively cueca, Chile's national dance. Dinner is on your own tonight in charming Santa Cruz.

Brimming with arid landscapes and terracotta-roofed homes, this pueblo will show us a richer perspective of rural life in Chile. Here, we'll get another taste of local culture when we join a Chilean family in their home for a traditional lunch.

As we venture deeper into the Colchagua Valley, a wine aficionados' paradise awaits. We'll visit a Colchagua Valley winery for an introduction to what this region does best: from carménère to Syrah. We'll learn about the region's soil and climate, as well as the history of wine and the winemaking process in this region, all while sipping on wine. Then, if you're traveling during the harvest season between February and March, you'll head out to the vineyard to pick your own grapes. Show off your skills as you make your own personal wine blend, based on what you've learned and tasted.

Our tour continues with a cable car ride to Cerro Chamán Observatory. Sitting at 256 meters above sea level, this perch offers stunning views of the valley and vineyards below. If you're interested, you can also discover the everyday life and culture of Chile's indigenous people. This optional tour of their home replicas will teach you how they inspired the local wines.

This marble structure dates to 1908 and serves as Uruguay's Congress Building.

After breakfast, your Buenos Aires adventure begins at full speed with a panoramic tour. We'll see the Plaza de Mayo, where porteños (Buenos Aires locals) gather to celebrate. This is arguably the city's most important square, named after the May revolution, when independence from Spain was declared. Alongside the square is the Casa Rosada, a governmental building equivalent to the White House, and the neoclassical Catedral Metropolitana, where Pope Francis resides.

We'll then venture southward to La Boca — a tiny neighborhood bursting with color, tango, futbol, and art. After taking in El Caminito's street art and Maradona caricatures of Maradona, the next stop is La Recoleta. As we stroll the elegant Avenida Alvear, we'll pass stately manors and sprawling green spaces until reaching the opulent, above-ground Recoleta Cemetery.
